Home to a world-class research university, major government research facilities, visionary entrepreneurs and the nation’s most highly educated population, Boulder is a center of innovation for Colorado. Ideally located at the base of the Rocky Mountains, the city is surrounded by the scenic beauty and recreational opportunities afforded by over 45,000 acres of open space and 150 miles of biking and hiking trails. Boulder offers an impressive choice of art, cultural, dining, entertainment, and shopping options, as well as excellent schools, high-quality healthcare, and earth-friendly policies.

The city of Boulder is located in Boulder County, part of the seven-county Denver metro area and the only county in the Boulder-Longmont MSA. The following report summarizes population and demographic information for the city of Boulder and Boulder County.

Population & Growth

Boulder has a population of approximately 103,000.

University of Colorado (CU) students represent over a fifth of Boulder’s population. The presence of the university has a significant effect on the demographic characteristics of Boulder residents, evidenced by a higher than average percentage of residents in the 18 to 24 age group, high rate of renter-occupied housing, and a relatively high percentage of residents with annual household incomes under $25,000. The university is also one of the factors influencing the high educational levels of Boulder residents.

Note: Census Bureau estimates of Boulder’s population, housing units and households are lower than local government estimates. In 2001, the City of Boulder filed a challenge to the 2000 Census count based on housing units that were not identified or included in census figures. The challenge was not accepted by the Census Bureau or State of Colorado and no adjustments to their population estimates for the city of Boulder were made. Population estimates made by the city of Boulder include the additional housing units not included in 2000 Census data and subsequent updates.

Between 1970 and 2000, Boulder's population increased from 66,870 to 99,093 for an average annual growth rate of 1.6%. From 2000 to 2010, population growth slowed to less than .5% per year. The city's population is expected to grow by an average of .6% a year to 119,371 by 2030.

Boulder County has approximately 300,000 residents. Between 2000 and 2008, the county's population grew an average of 0.3% a year. From 2007 to 2008, county population grew 1.4%. According to the Colorado State Demography Office forecasts, the Boulder County's population will grow to 389,257 by 2030.

State estimates indicate that within the county, Boulder (33.6% of county population), Longmont (28.8%), Lafayette (8.5%) and Louisville (6.4%) remain the largest municipalities. Between 2007 and 2008, the highest rate of population growth occurred in Lyons (8.1%) and Erie (6.8%). Boulder (1,278) and Longmont (1,008) experienced the largest increases in population.

Population Characteristics

The following information on the demographic characteristics of Boulder's population is based on information from the US Census Bureau's 2008 American Community Survey (ACS). The ACS is an on-going survey the Census Bureau conducts with a large national sample to provide updated estimates of population data between decennial census surveys. 2008 ACS data includes population in group quarters (college dorms, etc.). Note: 2009 ACS data is expected to be released in September 2010.

Age

The median age of Boulder's population is 28.7 compared to the national median of 36.9 years. According to Census data, nearly one-third of the city's adult population is between 18 and 24, reflecting the influence of the university on the area's demographic profile. By comparison, 13% of US adults are 18-24.

Education

Boulder residents are very well educated. According to the US Census Bureau's 2008 American Community Survey, among all metropolitan areas in the country, Boulder has the highest percentage of residents who have completed a bachelor's degree.

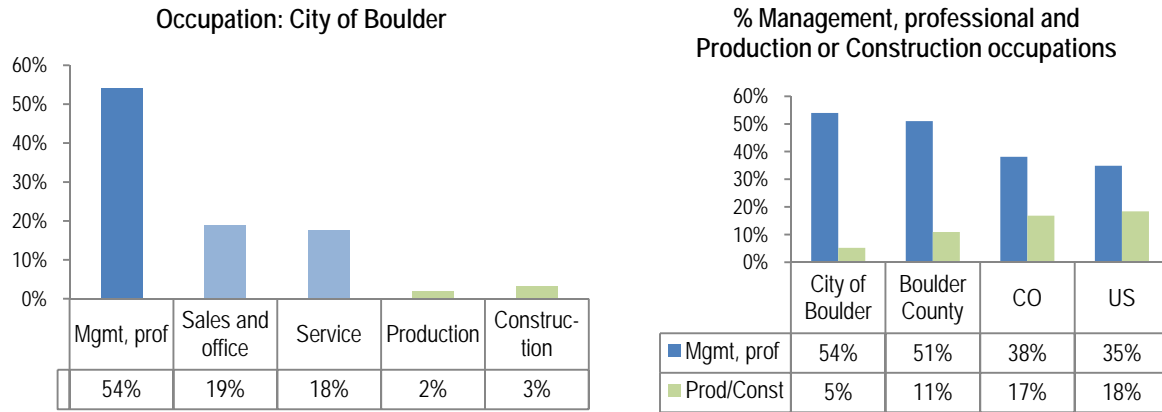

Ninety-four percent of the city of Boulder's adult population (25 or older) has a high school diploma; 69% have earned a bachelor's or advanced degree, more than twice the percentage of the US average of 28%. Many factors influence educational levels in the city, including the presence of educational and research institutions, including the University of Colorado, and a heavy concentration of businesses in advanced technology industries.

Occupation and Industry

The majority of working residents of Boulder are employed in white collar occupations. Over half (54%) of the city's civilian labor force is employed in managerial, professional or related occupations compared to 35% of the nation's workers.

Source: US Census Bureau, 2008 American Community Survey (based on SOC codes)

The city of Boulder has an especially high concentration of residents employed in:

- Computer and mathematical occupations (includes computer software engineers, programmers, system analysts, mathematicians, statisticians, etc): 7.1% (US: 2.4%)
- Life, physical, and social science occupations (includes astronomers, physicists, atmospheric and space scientists, biochemists, chemists, environmental and geoscientists, economists, market researchers, psychologists, sociologists, etc.): 5.1% (US: 0.9%)
- Arts, design, entertainment, sports and media occupations (includes artists, designers, actors, directors, athletes, coaches, dancers, musicians, news analysts, reporters, correspondents, writers and editors, public relations specialists, etc.): 5.1% (US: 1.9%)

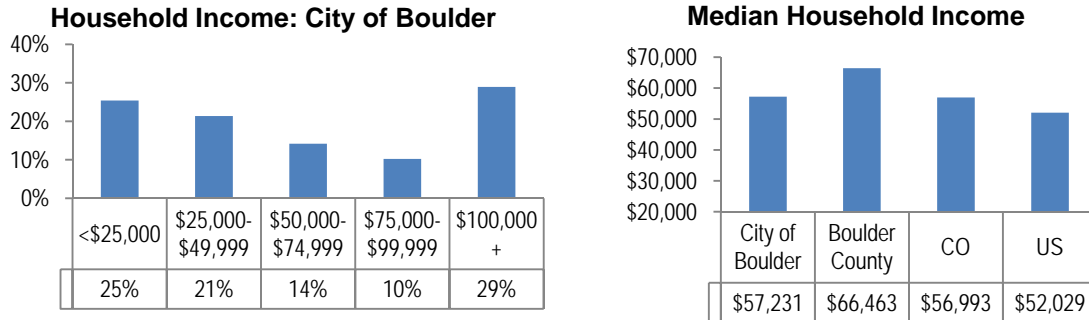

Many Boulder residents are employed in the education, healthcare, and professional/scientific, management and administrative services industries.

Income

Annual household income in the city is concentrated in the lowest and highest categories. The relatively high percentage of residents with incomes under $25,000 can be explained in part by the city's student population. The median household income for Boulder residents ($57,231) is higher than the state and national average.

Source: US Census Bureau, 2008 American Community Survey

Family incomes in Boulder are concentrated in higher categories. The median family income for Boulder residents ($94,890) is higher than the county, state and national averages.

Source: US Census Bureau, 2008 American Community Survey

Housing

Boulder's comparatively high home values and percentage of renter-occupied housing are influenced by a number of factors, including the presence of the University of Colorado and the city's desirable location and amenities.

Census data indicates 96.4% of the city's housing units were occupied when the survey was conducted in 2008. Owner-occupied housing represented 49% of occupied housing in the city and had a median value of $530,100. Renter-occupied housing represented 51% of occupied housing units. The median gross rent in the city was $976/month.

Most (94%) housing units in Boulder were built prior to 2000; more than two-thirds were built before 1980. (Note: While the recent economic downturn has affected Boulder's housing occupancy, home values and rental rates, in August 2009, Business Week magazine rated the Boulder MSA as the strongest housing market in the nation.)

About the Boulder Economic Council

This report is an example of the information and support the Boulder Economic Council provides to local businesses and companies interested in relocating to Boulder. Additional reports and information are available at www.bouldereconomiccouncil.org.

Established in 1997 by the Boulder Chamber, the Boulder Economic Council is a group of prominent business and community leaders committed to Boulder and its economic well-being. The council supports the healthy business sector necessary to sustain the cultural amenities, education, transit, open space and other facets of Boulder's outstanding quality of life.

The group helps lead the community in creating an economic vision and strategy that fosters business retention and growth. Boulder Economic Council members are uniquely positioned to help formulate major economic initiatives that shape Boulder's future by virtue of their individual standings in the community, knowledge of the market, familiarity with available resources and the collaborative relationships they have established. Council members and staff work to promote Boulder's economic vitality through work with both emerging and established enterprises.

Economic Sustainability through Collaboration

Our Mission

Grow, retain and attract businesses that reflect Boulder's values and contribute to our community's economic sustainability.

Our Strategy

Create partnerships and connections,

Provide information and support,

Serve as an advocate for Boulder's business community.

Boulder Economic Council activities include working to retain Boulder's home-grown businesses that have helped to create the character of our community; supporting organizations that provide entrepreneurs with training, networking, mentoring and access to funding sources; creating a unified voice for a strong local economy through private/public partnerships; providing information and support for local businesses and companies interested in Boulder; and participating in regional and statewide economic initiatives.
